The Grand Tour Images of the Old World

Another collaboration with Fine Art Society New Zealand

The artworks featured in this exhibition represent a wide range of images depicting the 'Old World', from the 19th to the 21st century.

The idea of the 'Grand Tour' was to widen one's understanding and appreciation of the world we live in. These tours were usually undertaken by young adults from upper class families, both from the UK as well as other European countries, often accompanied by tutors or chaperones. With the advent of travel agents like Thomas Cook, it became a rite of passage for many that was eventually available to the wider population.

In New Zealand we have our own tradition of the big 'OE' that has a similar aim of widening life experience of young people before they settle into a long-term career.

Images of the 'Old World' have always had an appeal to those living in the 'New World' as they represent an important part of our own heritage and identity.

To record the sights that they saw, a number of artists featured in this exhibition embarked on their own 'Grand Tour', while other artists typically painted from their own environment.

We trust you will enjoy looking through this glimpse into the 'Old World'.
